OFFICIAL PAPER OF LEWIS AND CLARKE COUNTY.

The INDEPENDENT has a larger daily circulation than any newspaper between St. Paul and Portland and a larger circulation than any other two daily papers published in Montana. It has no press room secrets; its subscription books are open to inspection, and it is always ready to prove that its circulation is as represented.

Entered at the Postoffice at Helena as second-class matter.

MR. BLAINE is not lacking in diplomacy. The ill-feeling that has long been supposed to exist between him and Perry Belmont, who had him on the gridiron before congress over the Peruvian scandal, did not prevent Mr. Blaine sending the brilliant young New Yorker a most courteous letter in accepting his resignation of the Spanish mission.

It is interesting to note that the first systematic steps toward preventing the extermination of the buffaloes were taken by a Montana man, S. L. Bedson, of Stony Mountain, who instituted experiments in the crossing of the bison with domesticated cattle. The estimate is made that with wild and domesticated buffaloes all combined there are not to exceed 800 of the species upon the American continent, where a few years ago there were probably millions.

In Washington, as in Montana, the adoption of the state form of government will result in the abridgement of the terms of numerous county officials, but there is the alleged to have prompted many of the unfortunate ones to institute a species of underhanded opposition to admission. The charge is a serious reflection upon the patriotism of those affected, but there is no possibility that their hostility will have any effect whatever. It is to the credit of Montana that all classes of citizens are in favor of admission at the earliest day possible.

The Spokane Falls Review, republican commenting on the appointment of Major Calkins to be associate justice of Washington, notes that the bar had recommended Mr. Blake for the position, and remarks, in substance, as the INDEPENDENT said several days ago, that "the president has approached very near the line that marks an adherence to the principle of home rule." Major Calkins was an original Gresham man in the Chicago convention, but after the withdrawal of that gentleman's name became a strong supporter of Mr. Harrison.

HENRY G. PEARSON, who died yesterday, had been twenty-five years in the postal service, the last seven of which he was postmaster at New York. His recent displacement by President Harrison was as strong an evidence as could be given that the present administration is more desirous of having the offices in the hands of active party workers than that efficiency should be the test, for while Mr. Pearson had a thorough knowledge of every branch of the postal service he had exhibited an aversion to making his office subordinate to the republican party. His refusal to suspend deliveries by letter carrier on election day in November, 1884, has often been ascribed as the cause of Mr. Blaine's defeat, for while the postoffice employees were all given an opportunity to vote as they wished, they were not ordered to the polls to work for the republican ticket. His displacement was in revenge for his political apathy at the time referred to without question, for there was no complaint of incapacity or neglect of his official duties.

THE UNIVERSITY PROJECT.

The information that the committee of gentlemen having in charge the selection of a site for the proposed Methodist Episcopal University of Montana have decided to accept an offer of land located within a few miles of Helena is highly gratifying to residents of this city, which thereby is put in a fair way to become the educational center of Montana, as it already is the business and social metropolis of the territory. It is estimated that the buildings to be erected by the university will cost $150,000, of which one-fifth, or thereabouts, will be at once expended. Up to the present time not enough attention has been given in this part of the country to the establishment of schools for higher education, but now that the population of Montana is rapidly increasing the necessity of such institutions has become apparent, and contributions have been freely made toward the purpose. The importance the business and professional men of Helena attach to the subject is shown by the fact that numerous tracts of land were offered for the university grounds, as donations, varying in quantity from ten to one hundred acres. The subscription lists, too, show the names of gentlemen of all shades of religious opinion, and representatives of nearly every business and profession. The establishment of one such school in the territory, also, will be an incentive to other religious denominations to initiate measures for the education of the young in the tenets of their own creeds, so that before many years elapse Montana will be as well provided, according to population, as any of the eastern states, with high-class schools.

ELECTING DELEGATES.

It should be born in mind that the minority system of representation that will govern in the selection of delegates to the constitutional convention differs materially from what is commonly known as the cumulative system of voting, and which is more generally understood than the plan under which the election of May 14 will be held. Under the provisions of the admission act the territory has been divided into twenty-five representative districts, from each of which three delegates to the constitutional convention are to be chosen; but no elector may vote for more than two delegates nor (as under the cumulative system of voting) may he cast two votes for one person for the office of delegate. The three persons having the highest number of votes in any district shall be declared elected. The effect will be to give the minority party in each district one representative of the three from that district. Where the parties are closely matched in point of numbers it is very likely to result, as it should, in the selection of the three best men from among the four candidates.

In case a ballot has upon it the names of more than two persons the judges of election will have no alternative but to reject the ballot, and so the person who cast it will lose his vote. Therefore it is necessary that in case an elector wishes to scratch from his ballot one of the names printed thereon and substitute that of another nominee, he should be careful to distinctly erase the name of the person for whom he does not wish to vote. No ballot must contain more than two names. County committeemen should see to it that voters in their counties are made thoroughly acquainted with the provisions of the law before the day of election.

MINES AND MINING

Tacoma's Smelter. Latest News From the Much-Boomed Chloride Camp.

Tacoma's new smelter, fifty tons capacity, is nearing completion. They figure on securing Cour d'Alene ore principally. As long as the Helena smelter lasts the Cour d'Alene mine owners will not send their ores west and pay for a double haul, when by shipping them here they will be on their final destination.

The latest news from the chloride camp is given in the Wallace Free Press, by F. A. Weber. He says: "The most work so far has been done on the property recently sold to James Wardner and others. The showing grows better as the work progresses. The ledge is reasonably figured as fifty feet in width, and is largely free milling ore, some of it running high. About twenty men are employed developing it. The showing is remarkably good for the work done."

"There are other claims which in any country would be considered good prospects, and these are being developed as the parties who own them can afford. Many of them give evidence of turning out well. "The show is fast disappearing and the field for prospecting is good. The crowd came in winter time and left before spring. The discoveries which gave evidence of a rich camp were made before snow fell. Beyond these there is nothing to speak of."

Mr. Weber feels confident that the Chloride camp is a rich one, and that time and work will prove it.

STOCK DETECTIVES.

Their Work Down to a Fine System—$10,000 Subscribed for Them.

Hon. Granville Stuart and other members of the stock association were discussing the recent horse-stealing case last night and thought it was a clear case of theft for which the Woodville man, Van Wart should have been convicted. "Inspector Cantrell did some good work in that case," said Mr. Stuart, "and should be credited for it. We are after these thieves hot and heavy and the effects of our work are not felt by the general public. But it is a fact, nevertheless, that since the stockmen took this matter in hand four-fifths of the cattle stealing of four years ago has been stopped. The public does not pay for this work. The stockmen are taxed for it and willingly pay their mill and one-half. Since March 30,000 private subscriptions have been quietly raised to hunt down cattle thieves. The board of stock commissioners has done some magnificent work, and the method of inspection is almost a perfection. We have inspectors at St. Paul who examine and make note of every brand that comes from or is bound for Montana. Nobody can take stolen cattle out of the territory. At every shipping point an inspector is made to sign a document containing a list of all the cattle. Should any person seem unreliable or whoever refuses to sign, the cattle are taken away from him, sold and the money sent to the treasurer of the association, who notifies the owner of any brand. In the list, the action taken and he can come to Helena and get the money direct from the sale of his stock any time within five years. Should any man lose cattle off the range, if he should examine the record kept here and finds his cattle were seized and sold, you see he gets his money and loses nothing. The best thing Montana ever had was this board of stock commissioners and detectives."

THE GIRL FOUND.

Such is the Report of Farmer Kelly's Missing Girl.

Farmer Kelly, of the Diamond ranch, came to the city yesterday in search of his daughter Maud, 15 years old, who left his home under peculiar circumstances last Sunday night. The old gentleman appeared greatly worried and did not care to speak of the matter, and walked from place to place, getting the police to aid him in his search. He said the girl left with one of three young men, but which one he does not know. Two of them, McDonnell and Travis, he had driven from his premises many times. At the postoffice yesterday he received two anonymous letters threatening his life, but these did not bother him, his only object being to find his daughter. He had heard and it was also verified from other sources that the girl had been secreted in this city in a house of ill repute, but was removed to other quarters yesterday. It was rumored at a late hour last night that the father found her and took her home with him, but the police do not know anything about it.

THE WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY.

A Subscriber Asks Some Pertinent Questions of Its Managers.

[Editor Independent.]—The citizens of Helena have recently been asked to contribute to the erection of a college in or near Helena, and said citizens have subscribed liberally to the enterprise, it being an institution much to be desired here. While these subscriptions were being secured, other liberal and enterprising citizens made offers of land on which to build the college. These offers included suitable locations, both on the east and west sides of the city, of land of great value, and easy of access to any part of Helena, but the matter having been left to ministers, (who are not noted for business ability) instead of business men, it seems highly probable that the selection when made is most liable to be many miles from Helena and on the line of no railroad and where no horse car or motor line can reach it. It seems to be the aim of these ministers to secure the largest possible number of acres without regard to their value or the fitness of the location or its convenience to Helena and those who have so liberally contributed to its erection. Those who have subscribed have done so on condition that the college be in or near Helena and since it is likely to be neither in or near Helena no one is bound by his subscription.

It having been obvious for several days that the location would be unsatisfactory, other parties are in the field and promise to locate a college in or near Helena if they can have the support of the citizens and those who have subscribed. It is probable they can probably yet have an opportunity to help build a college which their children can attend.

The Atlas Saloon.

Telebert & Wick opened the Atlas sampling rooms in the Atlas block last night, and from 8 o'clock until past midnight there was an immense concourse of people going in and out of the handsome rooms. The Atlas, which opens on Jackson street but which can be entered from Main street, is without doubt the most handsomely fitted up saloon in Helena. The bar is of cherry and the fixtures of old oak. There is a large mirror and an array of glassware starting in its beauty and attractiveness. Besides the large room where the bar is there are two withdrawing rooms which are also fitted up in an artistic and pleasing manner.

Last night the visitors were treated to a lunch such as has seldom if ever been equaled in Helena. It was served by a caterer who knows how to prepare a dish which will please the eye and at the same time satisfy the appetite. Tentative waiters were present and served customers with a skill that showed them masters of their business. Herman Koehler and George Bergh, the under house supervision everything had been prepared, saw that no guest left without having had a square meal. Prof. Rosner's orchestra furnished music which was excellent.

BETRAYED WHITE CAPS.

COUNTY OFFICIALS IN DANGER.

Regulators' Conspiracy to Flog Commissioners Which Was Revealed by One of the Gang.

Leavenworth, Ind., special: At the next term of the circuit court in Crawford county the grand jury will be called upon to investigate the last and one of the most remarkable outrages attempted by the White Caps of Indiana. The particulars have been reduced to writing, and the sworn statements will be brought forth just as soon as a little detective work shall finish up the evidence necessary to secure indictments and convictions.

The last outbreak of organized outlaws was caused by the determination of the county commissioners to sell the old poorhouse farm on Dry Run Creek, about four miles north of Leavenworth. The farm consists of 160 acres of land in a wild and sterile section, so broken up by hills and ravines as to be of little use. The soil is so thin and unproductive that the farm has for years been a constant burden upon the county. Not a term of the levy court has been held that an appropriation has not had to be made to meet a deficit in the poorhouse accounts.

The commissioners are Messrs. Hamilton, Martin, William Landis and Samuel Bateman, all respectable farmers. They decided to sell the old farm and purchase a better one. A tract of land, almost in the center of the county, very level and fertile, was selected, and a bargain was struck with the owner by which it was to be purchased for $5,000. Commonwealth's Attorney Suddarth was instructed to draw up the papers and make the transfer.

This news created great indignation among the citizens in the vicinity of the old farm, who had found means to profit largely of the sales of supplies to the paupers and in other ways. A meeting was held and the commissioners were requested not to sell the farm, but no attention was given to the petition. Dry Run is in the very heart of the white cap region, and the regulators determined to punish the regulators.

The night following the meeting at Leavenworth to ratify the sale and purchase was chosen upon for doing the work.

Leavenworth is the county seat and largest town in the county. The commissioners stopped at the principal hotel, which is in the very center of the place. The boldness of the plan to take out the board and administer the White Cap punishment of a switching will therefore be appreciated. The Dry Run White Caps laid their plans thoroughly, and called to their assistance a band of about twenty members of the organization from another part of the county. It was arranged that the two forces should meet in a place known as the Cedar Thicket, on the Marengo road, half a mile from here.

From that point they were to come to town, take the commissioners from the hotel and deal with them as it might seem best.

One of the gang happened to be a friend of one of the commissioners, and on the day of the meeting he went to town and revealed the plot to his friend. The others of the board would not at first believe the story, but on being convinced of its truth they arranged to give the outlaws a warm reception. Four other men were taken into their confidence, and several Winchester rifles and other arms were collected and secreted in the second story of the hotel. This building is situated on a little bluff not far from the Cedar Thicket, where the White Caps were to rendezvous, and the three commissioners and a couple of friends went to the hotel shortly after dark, and, armed with rifles, each took a stand at a window. The other two men were instructed to go out on the road and await the approach of the White Caps.

The arrangements were made with much secrecy, but one of the regulators in some learned what was going on. He accordingly went to the northern portion of the county to intercept the band that was to join the Dry Run regulators. The latter were taken care of later.

Just before midnight the two pickets who had been sent out by the commissioners heard the approach of the Dry Run band. A body of fifty mounted men rode up the hill and disappeared into the cedar thicket. Every man in the crowd wore the customary white cap regalia of white masks and tall white caps, shaped somewhat like pillow slips, but with holes for the eyes. They tore down a panel of the roadside fence and going into the center of the thicket dismounted and waited their reinforcements. The hours slipped away, however, and members of the Dry Run band began to act very uneasy. Occasionally one would walk up and down the road and look anxiously in the direction from which their confederates were expected to come.

It was not till 3 o'clock in the morning that the clatter of hoofs was heard, and then but a solitary horseman appeared. The night was cool, but his horse was covered with foam, and dashing up the hill he thumped and whistled. There was a response, and then the man came up near to where the pickets were hidden and entered the thicket. As he passed the pickets he was disarmed of his rifle, and he was quickly out of town in the evening. He was hastily questioned by the Dry Run crowd, and a hasty consultation took place. A minute later and the whole party was leaving the Cedar Thicket. They galloped rapidly toward Dry Run almost before the watchers realized what had happened. The plot had failed.

The pickets returned to Leavenworth and reported exactly what had occurred. Their statements were reduced to writing by notaries public and sworn to, then filed away for reference. None of the members of the band, who were hidden in the thicket, was recognized, but the pickets think they can identify the messenger. The case is being thoroughly investigated, and at the next term of the circuit court it is likely that a number of indictments will be returned.

White Capism has received its death blow. The constant fire of criticism, to which Crawford county has been subjected, has aroused the better class of citizen and they have rallied to the support of the good name of the commonwealth. That some reform is needed can be believed when it is stated that the grand jury, which recently adjourned after a six days session, returned 105 indictments for almost every imaginable offense.

Arms for Legitime.

New York, April 20.—If the action of Gen. Legitime's agents in this city is any criterion, the southern leader is by no means inclined to accept Gen. Hippolite's conditions and step out of the presidential place. Preparations to ship large consignments of arms and ammunition are being made by the aforesaid agents. Fifty cases of Remington repeating rifles, 150 cases of ammunition and a number of twenty pound rifled guns will also be shipped to Port-au-Prince shortly.

For America's Cup.

New York, April 20.—Wednesday next Lord Dunraven will receive a letter from the New York Yacht club accepting the challenge to a yachting contest for America's cup. It is an extremely courteous letter, and likewise exceedingly pointed as to what the club will and will not agree. The challenger will be accommodated with five races instead of three, as heretofore, if he desires. He may be accommodated as well as to the dates of racing within certain limits. The foreigner may have all the courses laid outside the harbor if he wants, but the races must be sailed in seven hours. The challenger is denied his wish as to the basis of time allowances he shall have, and has nothing to say about the time of day when the races shall be started, nor will any race be started in a fog.
